

JAMES HALL AND STEARNS HALL

amherst college • massachusetts

Amherst College is a prestigious liberal arts school in Massachusetts that was founded in 1821 in the town of the same name. Packed with more than its share of historical significance, Noah Webster (of dictionary fame) was one of the original trustees for this college that graduated its first African-American student in 1826.

Manufactured from Stromberg's Glass Fiber Reinforced Concrete (GFRC), the cornice of these buildings is able to stand up to the repeated rainy seasons and strong Massachusetts winter spells that come with the area. Stromberg Architectural Products has worked with educational institutions at all levels to provide quality products that help to build the best possible educational environments.
